THE 8 MAIN WINE REGIONS IN HUNGARY

EGER

PANNONHALMA

An excellent balance between freshness on one side, and ripe fullness on the other is evident in the white and red wines of Pannonhalmi Apátság, the 1 000 plus year old monastery that reestablished its wine making tradition over a decade ago after a long hiatus.

One of the oldest wine regions in Hungary, where the most famous and traditional Hungarian blended wines are produced. The white cuvées are called Egri Csillag and the reds are Egri Bikavér. Grand Superior wines are focused on specific vineyard selections, which means the highest quality in the region. Vines are grown on Volcanic or limestone soil which gives nice minerality and full-bodied structures for the wine.

SOPRON

Hungary's 'Capital of Kékfrankos' is living up to its name with the best of its classy, cooler climate Kékfrankos wines. Worthy of comparison to the brilliant Blaufränkisch made just across the Austrian border in Burgenland. Sopron has an exciting mix of soils including limestone, gneiss and mica schist.

TOKAJ

Unesco listed Tokaj is Hungary's best-known wine region, where the conditions are ripe for noble rot' to occur and create the sumptuously sweet Tokaji Aszú, one of the world's greatest wines. Tokaj's dry wines are also increasingly impressing international wine critics.

SOMLÓ

Hungary's smallest wine region that produces some of the country's biggest whites: complex, mineral-infused Juhfark, Furmint, Hárslevelű and which originate from a single volcanic hill of basalt rock. Kreinbacher is brilliantly pioneering traditional method sparkling wines in the region.

BALATON

Many microclimates and varying soils make for a wide variety of wine styles around Central Europe's largest lake, Balaton which also exerts a moderating influence. A rough distinction can be drawn between the mineral wines from the predominantly volcanic and limestone soils of the northern shore and the fruitier, rounder wines from the southern shore.

SZEKSZÁRD

Ripe Kékfrankos with a juicy sour cherry note is coming into its own as a single varietal wine, as well as bringing its structure and energy to the region's Bikavér (Bull's Blood), and other red blends. Szekszárd's Bikavér is also spiced up with a small amount of the Kadarka grape, which by itself makes a light coloured but spicy and distinctive red.

VILLÁNY

Sub-mediterranean climate and limestone soil gives a ripen taste for the wines on the south of Hungary. Mostly red wines, usually Bordeaux blends are produced in the region. It is a well-known fact that the winemakers of Villány were the first to recognise the power of quality and cooperation on the market, even before the regime change.

Register for our private wine tasting which includes 6 different Hungarian wines.

Reservation is required in advance with our colleagues.

Wine tastings are available upon request during the afternoons in Kupola Lounge.
